The Great Cardboard Boat Regatta

Admiral Joe Banuat and his cardboard flagship, the "SS Ms. Kojak," brought the First Annual Great Cardboard Boat Races to wet reality Tuesday at Dublin High School. The nine entries, all made of cardboard and piloted by students from the Admiral's art and introduction to crafts classes, set sail on VCSD-Dublin waters shortly before noon and when the paddling, splashing and near - sinkings were complete, the "USS Bear" had emerged triumphant. Winning crew was composed of Bob Smith and Stu Burke. It took the student boatmakers about 15 hours to build each of the craft. Each craft (tried to) travel the 25-yard course in splendid fashion, without sinking but with varying courses and at different speeds. Michael Trent's "Chicken of The Sea" came the closest to dissolving before reaching port while Mona Agard's "Dead on Arrival" died several leagues before finishing the course. Lucius Lee's "Smoke on The Water" went "poof" in mid - course but managed to stay afloat. "The Outhouse — Women Only," steered by Leslie Moffatt and Cindy Hard, took on some water and floundered soon after leaving "shore." Art II's entry, "Tauro," made a game run of it but was victimized by one crew member splishing while the other was splashing. Admiral Banuat reports that most all of the boats are still intact and a "second annual" regatta will definetly be held in '76.

Challenges 28 points

VCSD hits LAFCO call to merge

The study leading to a county agency's call for merger of Pleasanton and Dublin into "one city for the Upper Amador Valley" has been challenged by the Valley Community Services District on 28 points within that report.

VCSD can be expected to hammer home those arguments when the local Agency Formation Commission takes up that staff report in a Thursday afternoon session in Hayward. Lila Euler, president of the VCSD board of directors, will be accompanied by Paul Ryan, general manager for the iservices district, and Peggy McElligott, the district's legal counsel, in making that presentation. It was McElligott who prepared the detailed reply to the first Environmental Impact Report released by the LAFCO staff. Her questions, or challenges, are carried in full in the final EIR statement released eearlier this week. Also in that weighty document is a further LAFCO rebuttal to the VCSD points.

Underlying the services district challenge is the contention that the LAFCO study "has failed to look at that portion of the Amador Valley which is within the County of Contra Costa, and directly affected by the sphere of influence study." (LAFCO replies that its authority, and study area, are limited to the Alameda County portion of the valley.)

The LAFCO suggestion that both Pleasanton and Dublin could best solve their sewage treatment problems by creating one municipal system "appears to be somewhat regressive" in that current state thinking seems to favor "either the use of joint powers agencies ... regionalization or the use of sanitation districts." VCSD says "a general purpose government which cannot cross county boundaries" is a poor choice to solve the total Amador-San Ramon Valley sewer problem.

The district also challenges the LAFCO report for its "refusal to face the need for a separate sphere of influence for the Valley Community Services District." McElligott notes however that "It is admitted that there has not been specific and detailed study as to whether VCSD or Dublin has sufficient revenue base to support incorporation, nor is there any consideration of the possibilities of retaining the district as a viable entity. " The district legal counsel also charges that "no consideration is given to the political realities when there is total ignoring of existing viable governmental entities such as VCSD."

The VCSD statement also demanded (and got) updated LAFCO material in the revised LAFCO report on Dublin's latest commercial gains and residential construction. The "impression that the (VCSD area) is stagnant" was also rapped in that rebuttal.

ASSESSMENT BASE

VCSD questions LAFCO use of assessed values for the respective communities, suggesting that some property was in both the district and the City of Pleasanton "up until the 1972-73 fiscal year." (LAFCO replies that "every effort was made to avoid double counting of the assessed value." The 1974-75 assessment totals credit Pleasanton with $110 million in value; VCSD - in Alameda County only — $52.4 million; the balance of the sphere — primarily Castlewood and Happy Valley — $9.8 million.)

Existence of Interstate 580 as "a very significant barrier" dividing Dublin and Pleasanton is also cited by the VCSD rebuttal. It is this freeway which leads to "different communities of interest" within Dublin and within Pleasanton.

Basic to the VCSD challenge is the repeated reference to LAFCO's failure to consider that services district as a viable governmental entity with a firm future in any long-term plan for the Amador and San Ramon valleys. "It would appear that no realistic analysis of the possibilities of VCSD's continued existence has been made," McElligott charges. "Instead, the assumption is made that only bities are good and that under no circumstances in an urban area may a district (such as VCSD) continue."

Citing the service district's present form and responsibilities, McElligott says: "This is, of course, one of the major reasons fr retaining the identity of the VCSD, since it has the ability to exist in two separate counties at the same time."

Pleasanton pushes 'two-line' concept

PLEASANTON - This community will attempt to sell the Local Agency Formation Commission on a unique "two-line concept" when LAFCO considers Pleasanton's sphere of influence at 3 p.m. today.

LAFCO's proposed sphere for the Amador Valley includes the Dublin area — which city officials have not specifically addressed — but excludes the ridgelands and property south of the city which Pleasanton strongly contends strongly believe should be made a part of the sphere.

In a preliminary presentation to the city council Tuesday night, City Manager Bill Edgar outlined the city's strategy.

Pleasanton will propose an "urbanized boundary" that is almost identical to the sphere line proposed by LAFCO but will recommend adoption of an actual sphere boundary that incluqes the particular areas the city believes should be included.

Edgar emphasized the city does not now and perhaps will never plan any development in those rural areas but believes they should be included because the city is already providing services to some of the lwnd and any development ib those areas would certainly have an impact on Pleasanton.

The areas the city would like included in that sphere are:

√ The Ridgelands, where Pleasanton provides water service through its assumption of the obligations of the defunct Pleasanton Township County Water District.

√ Ridge, for Bill Appprson's proposed guest ranch on Apperson which Pleasanton has agreed to provide monitoring services for Apperson's private sewer plant.

√ Tassajara Valley, a relatively flat area north of Interstate 580 and immediately east of Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center, which could have a decided impact on the city if it were developed outside of Pleasanton's jurisdiction.

√ That area south of Pleasanton, including flatlands near Sunol and the Vallecitos Nuclear Center, which has been a part of the Pleasanton planning area for some time and which the city would be required to provide services if it were developed.

Edgar said the city should emphasize to LAFCO that it does not plan development in that area between the "urbanized boundary" and the larger proposed sphere line "but we do want LAFCO to recognize that we will be required to provide services" for whatever developments do occur.

The LAFCO meeting will be held at 3 p.m. today in the Alameda County Public Works Building, 399 Elmhurst St., in Hayward.

Firemen's muster timing criticized by churches

PLEASANTON - Scheduling of this Sunday's Firemen's Muster parade was criticized yesterday when the Rev. Marc and Mrsx Ruth Kluender of the city's Trinity Lutheran Church asked, "why (the fire department) would seek to divide the interests and loyalty of the people of Pleasanton by beginning this parade at a time when most of Christian Protestant America is at worship.

"You force us either to disobey our conscience," the letter sent to the department continues, "or to be separated from an event that should rightfully be a part of all of us and not just those who are indifferent to public worship."

The parade is scheduled for 10:30 a.m., Sunday.

"It's an oversight," said Capt. Doug Cracraft, "I have to agree with the person writing in."

The parade has "traditionally been held on Sunday, and I think at that time. If it's been on Saturday, it's been at that time. But it will definitely be corrected next year," he added.

"I don't believe it was taken into consideration by the Muster committee," Capt. Bert Cherry told The Times. "We'll try to schedule it for a more appropriate time, (but) for this year the plans are set.

The Kluenders, six-year residents of Pleasanton, argue that "what disturbs us is the increasing attempt to pull citizens apart by scheduling community events for a Sunday morning hour on school premises, on the athletic field, and now even in our civic life."

VCSD legal problems may total $56 million

It appears the Valley Community Services District will soon be back in court facing a number of plaintiffs and damages totalling more than $56 million.

The City of Pleasanton announced Wednesday it is authorizing a claim against VCSD that will ask damages of more than $100,000.

On another front, approximately 10 Pleasanton builders, whose developments would be serviced by VCSD, are considering filing separate lawsuits based on the $56 million claim they filed in December of last year.

The city's action, according to City Attorney Ken Scheidig, was prompted because of the "lack of action on the part of VCSD to undertake steps necessary to allow the district's sewage treatment plant to expand to its present hydraulic capacity of five million gallonr per day."

The claim will allege the district has not "diligently sought" additional land to meet Regional Water Quality Control Board disposal requirements which would allow the expansion to 5 mgd.

The suit, which Scheidig plans to file by mid-June, will claim VCSD "has breached its agreements of June 14, 1967, and Nov. 8, 1972 with the City of Pleasanton and...the city has sustained damages as a result of said breach."

Scheidig said he did not know the exact amount of damages that would be asked but said it would likely be in excess of $100,000.

Sources close to the building industry also indicated Wednesday as many as 10 lawsuits would be filed against VCSD by individual developers within two weeks.

Those suits would be based on the $56 million claim filed in December and would be prompted by what the builders term VCSD's "lack of responsiveness" in seeking an expansion of sewer capacity.

That claim was filed when VCSD voted to apply for an expansion to 6.5 mgd capacity, rather than to the 8 mgd capacity stipulated to in the court-approved 1972 settlement agreement.

Following a suit filed by Pleasanton which forced VCSD to apply for the larger expansion, the builders did not withdraw that claim because they wanted to have a lever to insure VCSD would proceed with an expansion.

CalTrans accepts bid for Interstate 580 widening

The last hurdle in widening Dublin Canyon to full freeway standards has been cleared with acceptance of a low bid for that job that "is within one percent of our estimate."

A spokesman for CalTrans revealed that S.J. Groves of San Diego had submitted a bid of $31,578,000 for the first phase of that freeway job which is expected to top $100 million in total. The engineer's estimate for phase one was $31,246,000. There had been concern that delays and threats of court suits from environmentalist or building trades' groups might force contractors to pad their bids, and possibly exceed the approved budget figure.

"It looks like a good bid, and we expect to sign the papers in about two weeks," the CalTrans official said. Four bids were submitted before the May 28 deadline.

There is still a possibility of court action related to the scaled-down freeway "compromise" worked out by CalTrans and the Sierra Club, but insiders expect that "the work will be allowed to move forward, and any suits will ask the later question of when the full eight lanes should be put to use." Alameda County board of supervisors is one body expected to demand legal answers on that point.

This initial contract will cover five miles, one half the total Canyon length. The job is expected to take three years. (Details of the settlement involving CalTrans and the Sierra Club were carried in Wednesday's Times.)

'Closeup' Washington views differ

Amador and Dublin students participating in the Closeup program week in Washington, D.C., came back with diverse views on the effectiveness and honesty of Congressmen and government officials.

But one thing they all agreed on, the program is one they'd recommend to upcoming sophomores and juniors.....and if they could, they'd like to go back next year.

This is the first year that Closeup has been offered to students attending schools in the western United States, thanks largely to a former Amador Valley High graduate who worked with the project.

Attending from Amador Valley High were Joyce Johnson, Mark Zevanove, Rich Curry and Greg Wilfley. Barbara Follenfant and Karen Knowles attended from Dublin High School. Nine students from Granada High School, 10 from Livermore and a contingent from Foothill were also a part of the 250 from Bay Area schools.

July 1 set for start of Dolan

Work on the long-delayed Dolan site intermediate school in the Murray Elementary School District should be underway by July 1.

That happy news came as a result of papers filed in Superior Court that will allow the district to go ahead with construction despite an ongoing battle over the price of the land.

One hurdle does remain, however. MESD officials must appear before the State Allocation Board in Sacramento on June 19 to gain that body's approval in case the district has to pay more than it had estimated.

MESD Business Manager Phillip Chubb said "We'd expect that they'd approve it" and added that such approvals had been granted routinely in the past.

Chubb indicated that the district will advertise for bids on the site work at the campus, which is bordered by Padre Way and Castilian Road in Dublin. Bids cannot be accepted until after the Board of Allocation meeting, but if all goes well in Sacramento, Chubb anticipates that work will begin by the end of June.

Hopefully, all the site work — grading, drainage systems and so on — will be completed before the rainy season and perhaps the construction of some buildings will get under way this fall. However, the earliest possible occupancy of the school is the fall of 1976 and a more realistic date would be the winter of 1977.

MESD has been involved in prolonged negotiations with the owners of the land, who have asked for two appraisals of the property and are forcing the district into the courts to buy the land.

Connection fees

Pleasanton man wins some, loses some

PLEASANTON - A Pleasanton man whose home was damaged by fire won a partial victory before the city council Tuesday night in his attempt to get connection fees waived for replacement of that home.

Jerry Aldrich's home on Second Street was seriously damaged by fire and because portions of it were deemed unfit unless they were replaced, he decided to raze the structure and rebuild it completely.

Aldrich then discovered he would be charged the 1975 water and sewer connection fees, which amount to more than $1,000, since no connection fees were in effect when the house was originally built.

It has been the city policy to charge the difference between original fees and present fees when buildings are replaced.

Aldrich's case, however, prompted a review of that policy and the city council decided on May 12 to undertake a case-by-case review to determine if fees should be waived in cases where structures are destroyed by a calamity.

That policy change, however, did not help Aldrich very much. The staff recommended and the city council agreed, by a 3-2 vote, not to waive the $975 sewer connection fee.

The council did agree to refund water connection fees paid by Aldrich, not because of his plight, but because of conflicting ordinances on the city books.

Assistant City Manager Al Campbell told the council since there were two ordinances dealing with water connection fees on the books and since they were in conflict, "it should be settled in favor of the applicant in this case" and the ordinances should be clarified so the situation will not be repeated.

Campbell said it was his recommendation the sewer connection fee not be waived because "it was the option of the property owner to tear the house down and rebuild it."

Anna Martensen argued in favor of waiving the fees and told the council she had checked with eight other cities and found that the majority of them do waive such fees in cases of a catastrophe. "You should not recharge," she said, "everyone of these cities does not recharge when homes are demolished."

Campbell emphasized the city was not "recharging" Aldrich because no fees were paid when the structure was built since none were in effect at that time.

Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire, who along with Mayor Ed Kinney and Councilman Roger McLain, voted to deny the waiver of sewer fees, said she saw a vast difference between a home "damaged by fire and one demolished by its owner. The insurance repaid that which was damaged," she added, "and he chose to demolish" the rest.

Councilman Bob Philcox, who along with Councilman Bill Herlihy opposed the motion, said, "When a person has a sewer and water hookup, I think they should be entitled to keep it and I don't think they should have to pay for it. They're not taking a service away from anyone else."

Herlihy added he thought the council's action was "grossly unfair" because you're penalizing an individual who loses his home through a calamity but you don't penalize those who have never paid sewer fees and who have never had a fire."

BUDGET APPROVED

The council also approved the $6 8 million budget for the coming fiscal year. That budget includes a four-cent tax rate increase to $1.74 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Herlihy cautioned citizens that an additional tax rate increase might be levied in late summer when the final assessed value figures are set. Under the terms of SB 90, the city could raise taxes by more than 10 cents (exclusive of the four cents already included in the budget) and Herlihy said he did not want to have "anyone surprised if taxes are raised late this summer.

He cited the city's fire and police departments as two areas where more money is needed.

In other action, the council:

√ Approved the removal of six heritage trees and 20 smaller trees from the Robert Koopman property at 148 Ray St. to permit construction of a commercial service building;

√ Placed a five-acre parcel east of Hopyard Road and northeast of the First National Bank drive-in facility into a study district for four months;

√ Awarded the bid for resurfacing of Main Street to East Bay Excavating Co., Inc. Their $30,715.20 bid was the lowest of seven received and was nearly $10,000 less than the engineer's estimate; and √ Directed the city attorney to prepare an ordinance to govern parades in Pleasanton.

But who gets the permits?

PLEASANTON — The city council, all too familiar with the feeling of opening the cupboard and finding it bare, discussed finding a method to reserve some of the city's few remaining sewer permits for industrial development Tuesday night.

Of the 250 permits granted by the Regional Water Quality Control Board, only 36 remain. (An additional five are reserved for the city and County of San Francisco and six others are planned for existing holding tanks.)

Staff had recommended giving four of those permits to individual property owners who have long been waiting for sewer hookups and the remaining 32 to the H.C. Elliott Co., which is constructing in the Vintage Hills area.

The council approved granting the four individual permits and granted some time extensions to those who have requested them but delayed granting Elliott those 32 permits until the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce can report on whether they might aid the city in its attempts to gain more industrial development.

Councilman Bob Philcox said he thought those 32 ought to be reserved for industrial development because, "once it's all gone, there we sit again with nothing. We talk about industrial development but we can't solicit it because we have no sewer capacity."

When asked what the city's industrial prospects were, City Manager Bill Edgar replied it is a "chicken and egg situation. We don't have industrial prospects because we don't have sewer capacity." He added he could not guarantee that if permits were reserved for industrial development, they would be immediately snapped up.

Edgar also reminded the council the regional water board might grant the city more than 250 additional permits if the sewer plant operates odor-free through the fair period. "It depends on whether you want to be optimistic or pessimistic," he said. "If we get the other 250, we will virtually have taken care of all the committed residential development" in the city.

To further complicate matters, city attorney Ken Scheidig said if the city reserved some permits for industrial development and they were not immediately used, the regional water board "could prohibit you from making use of them."

Elliott, who received 45 of the original 250 allocation of permits and who had applied for the remaining 32, would like permits for 132 lots. He has filed a $2.5 million claim against the city because of the unavailability of sewer capacity but has not yet filed suit.

The council continued consideration of those 32 permits until the June 9 meeting when the Industrial Committee will be asked to respond.

Pleasanton mail delivery relief in sight

PLEASANTON - About 100 Pleasantonites who have not been receiving home mail delivery will soon get relief.

The city council Tuesday night asked City Attorney Ken Scheidig to draft an ordinance that will allow those residents to install curbside mailboxes. That ordinance will likely be adopted on June 9 and will go into effect immediately.

The problem has arisen because the Unites State Postal Service, in an effort to reduce expenses, has decreed that all homes in new subdivisions will no longer receive door delivery but will only be serviced through curbside mailboxes.

The city's ordinance code prohibited the installation of such boxes and thus, those residents have been forced to drive to the post office every day for their mail.

The council took the action "reluctantly" because, although it is sympathetic to the plight of the "disenfranchised" citizens, council members voiced a determination to continue to fight the postal service's edict.

Referring to litigation several of those citizens had threatened, Councilman Bob Philcox said, "It bothers me to see people have to sue the city to get a service they're entitled to."

He questioned, however, if "that is the general consensus of those people."

Mayor Ed Kinney suggested a poll of those residents but no action was taken on that idea.

Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire said she supported the "interim measure" to allow those people to receive home mail delivery but added, "I hope this doesn't weaken our position. I hope it is made clear that we will continue to oppose this" curbside requirement.

The council then directed the city attorney to draft an ordinance that will allow for an encroachment permit procedure for people who wish to install curbside mailboxes. That ordinance will contain a provision that, if the postal service requirement is overturned, the curbside boxes will have to be removed.

In addition, the council asked Scheidig to draft a resolution to sdnd to legislators and the postal service, which states the city still plans to fight the requirement.

Newlin says salary talks smooth

PLEASANTON — Dr. Bruce Newlin, Amador-Pleasanton schools superintendent, claims salary negotiations with the Certification Employees Councils of the respective districts are running smoothly and on schedule for adoption of tentative budgets at meetings early in June.

Amador district board members met in executive session Tuesday night with the board's legal representative, Keith Breon. The latter's presence in meet and confer sessions, the district's euphemism for salary and benefits negotiations, has concerned Amador Valley Secondary Educators Association president Jim Eaton, among others.

At least one district administrator has indicated that cuts in the program will be necessary. Just where they will come has not been decided. Whether the percentage of salary increase for teachers and classified employees will bear the full brunt of belt tightening is still debatable.

Next regular school board session is the Pleasanton district trustees meeting set for Wednesday in the (District Education Center board room). In an unrelated matter, Linda Alexander of the Amador district's campus smoking legislation committee said today that 2,500 students, parents and teachers will be surveyed.

In order to obtain a "90 per cent confidence" survey, with no more than a 4 per cent error factor, Ms. Alexander said that 465 students and their parents (amounting to another 465 persons total), and 73 teachers will be sampled at Amador. The figures for Dublin will be 420 students, 420 parents and 70 teachers. For Foothill, 160 students, 160 parents and 28 teachers.

Castilleja condominium auction reset to June

LIVERMORE - A public auction for the Castilleja del Arroyo Phase 3 condominium complex on Murrieta Boulevard has been rescheduled for June 13.

Announcement of the postponement was made by Castilleja trustee and agent Leonard Kolod. The auction originally was scheduled for yesterday afternoon in Oakland.

The history of Castilleja is one of legal problems. The most recent, involving the complex versus the City of Livermore, was resolved in court last month.

The city was required to approve Castilleja 3 subdivision maps enabling the development to become a condominium (it was being used as an apartment building) and Livermore in turn received $10,600 of additional park dedication fees.

The suit was filed by David Ray, a Los Angeles based attorney appointed receiver to clear the title of Daniel Gillice's 154-unit, three-story complex. Ray was appointed after Gillice went bankrupt.

Continental Mortgage Investors, Inc., of Boston, Mass., forced foreclosure on Gillice's property because of a default on a $2.8 million loan, it has said.

Litagation against the city on the project originally was handled by local attorney David Madis.

Valley pair to exhibit '29 Ford

A 1929 Ford closed cab pick-up owned by Larry and Jan Ryder of Pleasanton will be one of the vehicles on display during the Ninth Annual Silverado Concours D'Elegance Sunday, June 1 at The Silverado Country Club in Napa.

The event open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m is one of the biggest fund raisers sponsored by the Children's Hospital Branches to benefit the medical center for children in Oakland.

The Ford pick-up has an interesting past in the story of how Ryder, after only five days of ownership, neglected to turn off a valve leading to the fuel system. Gasoline drainage to his home's water heater pilot resulted in an explosion and fire which totalled the truck and considerably damaged the home.

After four and a half years' restoration work, the car was shown last year for the first time and won first place at tha Mill Valley, Sacramento and Lafayette concours. It placed first in spectator choice at the Dublin festival, and second in the best of show category.

Rich Guasco, also of Pleasanton, will display his 1940 Ford at Silverado.

A variety of food, drinks and novelty concessions will be staffed by Children's Hospital Auxiliary members, and continuous entertainment by the Oakland Banjo Band and Smith's Slippery Gulch Dixieland Jazz Band will enhance the nostalgic atmosphere.

Gary Barber donated a Motorcross bike to the KQED auction checked in by Judy Lougheed of Livermore who collected items from local merchants.

DR. ARTHUR BARNES

Final symphony Saturday at LHS

Dr. Arthur Barnes will direct the Livermore-Amador Symphony in the final concert of its 12th season Saturday, May 31 at the Livermore High School auditorium.

Cellist Garfield Moore of Oakland will be the guest soloist in the 8:15 p.m. performance of the "Concerto in B Minor" by Dvorak. Moore has been a member of the Youth Chamber Orchestra of the Oakland Symphony since age 13.

The second half of the program will be a rendition of Brahms' "Symphony in E Minor."

Tickets, available at the door, are $3 for adults and $1 50 for students, with complimentary admission to those who subscribe to a 1975-76 symphony membership. Symphony subscribers will also be able to renew membership for the next season at the Saturday concert.

Auditions set for Pleasanton Playhouse musical King and I

Taking its first steps toward a three-week run in August, the Pleasanton Playhouse production of "The King and I" will be a cultural extravaganza BY and FOR valley residents.

With exotic Hollywood costuming, a full symphony orchestra, the sparkling musical score of Rogers and Hammerstein, and a cast of over 100 men, women and children the production will draw on talent from throughout the valley.

Auditions for adult roles are slated June 16, 17 and 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial Most roles will require a singing audition Building in Pleasanton. Dennis Kohles will direct the musical drama produced under the auspices of the Pleasanton Recreation Department, and the local Institute of Theater Studies board. Kohles, who recently directed the Pleasanton Playhouse production of "Dames at Sea," has been engaged professionally in many facets of the musical theater and is working toward a master's degree in musical theater directing at San Francisco State University. He is also cast in the Contra Costa Theater musical "Guys and Dolls."

"I intend to stick to a traditional rendition of the musical, steering clear of politics and preaching," Kohles says. "People have been hit over the head with messages, so I'll concentrate entertainment for its own sake."

Popular musical numbers from "The King and I" include "Getting to Know You," "Whistle a Happy Tune," "Shall We Dance," and "The March of the Siamese Children."

The play depicts the clash of cultures in a story about an English governess who is hired by the King of Siam to teach his numerous progeny. Although Kohler admits there may be subtle racialism in the "Westernization" of the king's harem, the musical is full of romance, humor, and the sheer beauty of the music by Rogers and Hammerstein. Kohles's treatment will be very much under control at all times.

"The king must defend his traditinal ways against the changes Anna brings," says Kohler. "He demonstrates his

Strongest character in the play is Anna, the English governess, who emerges as "one of the original women's libbers" in the light of current affairs. She constantly frustrates the king's efforts to treat her as he treats the wives of his harem.

"I won't have to point up that side of Anna's character, it will just play that way naturally," Kohles admits with a laugh.

The two central characters are opposites, a study in contast, according to Kohler. Anna is a reserved Englishwoman, with her emotions feelings physically, loudly and imposingly.

"Anna displays a lot of fire herself, especially in one scene, but " --- even then she is in control of herself."

Kohles would like to cast in the role of Anna a mature woman who can appear about 30 to 40 years of age and carry an English accent. The role is created for a soprano. The king, a bass, would have a rich low voice, and display a virile charisma. The actor cast in this role would probably be solidly-built and physically strong (the better to throw things about in royal anger!)

The romantic leads are carried by the young lovers Lun Tha (tenor) and Tuptim (lyric soprano). Each is basically a singing role and demands more of a singer than actor. Lady Thiang, a mezzo-soprano, is featured in several numbers including "Western People Funny."

Other adult parts include a male chorus of ten priests of Siam, a female chorus of royal wives, royal dancers and four Amazons ("handsome physiques who mainly pose"), as well as several Siamese and English officials.

The greatest portion of the cast made up of the children of the king's household. Nearly 70 children between the ages of 5 and 13 years will be recruited to play princes and princesses.

A music and drama workshop will be conducted for the children, and those who complete the workshop will be cast in the play. Children may sign-workshop, which includes a $10 fee, up for the July 2 at 1 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial Building. Classes will be conducted Mondays and Wednesdays, July 7-20 from 1 to 3 p.m. Hourly night rehearsals re planned August 3-7.

The extravaganza will be staged to publicize Cask and Mask's efforts to find a theater in which to perform. SETTING THE SCENE

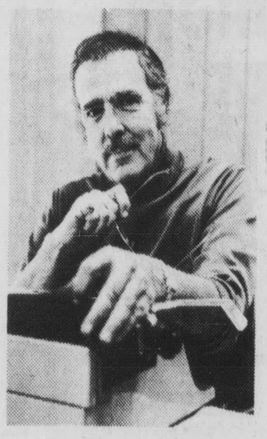
Bill Hayden



One of the greatest promotional campaigns for a film in recent times is Columbia Pictures tub-thumping for "BREAKOUT" featuring that latter-day action star Charles Bronson. They have done a great job in stirring up interest, or at least an awareness of the picture's existence. I can report this as fact because a very good friend of mine who could care less about movies noticed they had been plugging it on TV.

In the beginning all the flackery was coming right out and saying that the film would only be around for one sensational action-packed week at a couple of hundred theatres in your neighborhood. Now they're extending the time to two weeks which is an indication things are going much better than the distributor imagine in the beginning. They're going all out to get the most out of it that can be had in a short time for a quick return and no businessman can blame them for that.

After absorbing decades of promotional material, I don't run to the nearest theatre to catch the latest epic on display. I will admit, however, the sheer weight of this 'come-on' got to me I had to know what Columbia was up to. A trip to the Vine-Livermore — where "BREAKOUT" goes into a second big week — provided me with a few interesting angles and insights into the type of film lending itself to 'exploitation' tactics today.

I'm happy to see a journeyman actor like Bronson make it big — almost to super-star status — after what seems to be a couple of centuries of hard work at the thankless level of supporting or character parts. He presents the rough, tough Bronson image with considerable style.

A number of fine actors are now lending their names and talent to featured roles of 'cameo' bits. There is really no excuse for John Huston to be around at all. Any competent actor could have handled his brief assignment that must have been completed in one afternoon of shooting. The name Huston, however, does have considerable impact in the list of credits even if the character he plays is right out of "Chinatown" and, in fact, could have been outtakes from that flick Robert Duvall, of THE GODFATHERS fame, plays the second lead. He's neither credible nor incredible because the role is so vaguely drawn and so inconsistent from scene to scene that it has virtually no impact at all.

There is a tremendous amount of action. If that's your coup of tea, you'll love "BREAKOUT" especially if you go for blood, guts and assorted gore lavishly on display for its own sake.

The principal weakness of "BREAKOUT" is not its bloodthirsty action. Lack of motivation is the big problem. It might be argued that a lot of silly violent action goes on in our world without too much regard for the reason for it. However, movies or other theatrical media are not life. They are an enlargement or extention of it and as such, when blown out of normal perspective or proportion, require rigid rules to make everything believeable.

The non-plot of "BREAKOUT" comes out of nowhere; is never explained and finally disappears into a lively fadeout without having gone very far. Obviously, logic is not what the producer, the director or the actors had in mind. Ditto, that's not what the action customer is paying for at the boxoffice. As long as logic is out the window everyone might as well relax and enjoy being on the edge of their seats for an hour and a half of 'forward drive'.

"BREAKOUT" is not for the squeamish. The climatic action can be shattering even for the docile observer. I won't, however, tell you what it is because you'd be looking for it and that would spoil the total effect which is pretty overwhelming.

A special commendation to whoever created those few moments of extra suspense. The event builds rather casually but is telegraphed ahead just far enough in advance so the audience is in on what is going to occur and has to sit there hoping it won't happen but absolutely helpless to prevent or change the outcome.

The co-hit I suffered through was "CHOSEN SURVIVORS" featuring Jackie Cooper and Alex Cord. It was a Sci-Fi horror story that went awry and will be a great tax-write-off for someone. This week, you can see "BREAKOUT" with another Bronson thriller "MR. MAJESTYK" a film I will neither confirm or deny as viable entertainment.

Lancelot, the peerless knight and bridge player, looked over at wily Mordred sitting West and remarked, "I am going to treat you like a friend for this hand."

Then Lancelot played the four of clubs from dummy. Gawaine, sitting East, had to play a low club and Mordred's jack was allowed to hold the trick. He led a second club. Lancelot won with his ace and drew trumps with three leads, being careful to win the third one in dummy. Then he played the deuce of diamonds. Gawaine followed with the seven.

Lancelot turned to Mordred and said, "Here's another friendly trick for you." Then he played his nine spot and Mordred made another trick with a jack.

"Gadzooks," said Mordred, "Methinks I like you better when you act as an enemy. 'Tis best I take my ace of spades ere it is lulled to sleep by thy soft words."

So Mordred played his ace of spades and held Lancelot to a contract that would have been beaten if Gawaine had ever been able to gain the lead.

Jill comes tumbling AFTER

Mike Zampa

Pleasanton Assemblyman Floyd Mori pushed an equal rights athletic bill through his education committee in the State Capital two weeks ago, similar to one quashed by Gov. Reagan last year.

Mori's legislation calls for "equal athletic opportunity for women attending California state colleges." The bill would require the college system to provide "equal funding and opportunities for male and female student programs on as reasonable a basis as possible."

"Of course, this does not mean that college football teams will be required to have women players," Mori pointed out in a publicity release. "Women will simply be given an equal opportunity to participate in athletics and compete with other women in team and individual sports."

"I believe that athletic activity is a necessary and vital part of the educational process." Mori's flier stated. "We certainly cannot discriminate against women by allocating 90 per cent of a school's athletic budget to men's sports and only 10 per cent to women's ."

Mori's release dredged up the defeat of a similar bill last year. In an adendum, however, the former Pleasanton mayor expressed hope for passage this time. The difference, he said — a more "progressive governor."

Progressive is a fine term to bandy back-and-forth, but a more crucial qualification for scrutiny of this legislation is practically.

Large numbers of liberal folk have clamored for sexual sports equality in school programs. In stronger terms than Mori's, some have demanded a 50-50 split of athletic department funds in high school and college.

What's missing is a coinciding plan to fund the girls on an equal level with the boys. Mori failed to cover that point in his publicity blurb. Let's hope it's included in his assembly bill.

There's no need to restate the financial bind of schools in these tight money days, or the precarious perch of interscholastic athletics. Even in Mori's back yard high schools are faced with a return to low budget intramural sports as an alternative to the traditional programs.

School budgets have creaked and groaned the last two or three seasons with the shotgun birth of girls teams. Generally, when staffs have been forced to pinch pennies for the sake of girls, they have done so willingly. The young ladies' place on the field is an accepted principle.

Rash demands for half of the take are liable to break the bank however. Considering the financial stress in most athletic departments, it isn't feasible to give the girls as much as the boys have.

Perhaps it isn't just, either.

There are no figures lying here on the desk, but it's unlikely that girls' participation in college sports comes anywhere near the boys'.

What's more, women's sports do not produce the revenue men's sports do. That will be important in future seasons, as administrations funnel less and less of the operating budget into school teams.

The counter argument is that women don't need as much money as the men currently receive. So, to acheive equality without increased expenditure, simply halve the men's budget, and turn the rest over to the ladies.

It's democratic as hell, but it ain't practical.

Such a split would severely crimp any school competing in the NCAA. To make up for the loss of of funds, schools would drop sports that don't bring something back in. Colleges could end up with football and basketbll, and nothing else.

This situation wouldn't sit well with two powerful groups within the state: a lot of legislators, and every last coach.

The athletic department is a strong lobbying force within a high school or college It is well equipped to protect its niche in the curriculum.

And in many instances it may have the blessing of politicians. Many office holders were former athletes. Even the ones who weren't can feel a kinship with the coach, because both depend on winning to earn money. Legislators often find it beneficial to align themselves with sports figures.

There is probably a goodly number of Sacramento law makers who would object to alterations in the financial structure of college sports, if they threatened the very fabric of sports.

If you've grown up with America's athletic tradition, you might be reluctant to sign away its future.

Mori has survived the first round against sporting reactionaries, sliding the bill through his education committee. He may succeed in clearing it through the Assembly and the Senate. Perhaps the "progressive" new governor will okay the legislation.

But someone is still saddled with the burden of financing an athletic budget balanced between men and women.

California high schools have been forced to grapple with that dilemma this past year. They haven't come up with a satisfactory answer yet.

A possible solution for colleges could be a standard allottment to each school, based on the projected number of male and female athletes. If the men's roster is 30 per cent greater, they would get an extra 30 per cent of the cash. Additional funds might be allocated for sports that do produce gate receits, men's football, and men's and women's basketball for instance.

Undoubtedly there are better methods to finance athletic programs for both sexes. But someone ought to suggest one. The easy part is legislating equality. It gets tough when you have to implement the means.

Youth kickers near The End

The youth soccer season will finally come to a close Saturday in San Jose.

Teams from Dublin and Pleasanton will be involved in Western Regional Championship contests, then everyone can expel a tremendous sigh of relief until it starts up again in late summer.

"It's been nine months, and that's a pretty long time for these boys," says Bob Wagonhoffer, coach of the under-16 Dublin United team. They will play the Tacoma Strikers at 5:30 Saturday in Spartan Stadium, as a preliminary to the San Jose Earthquakes' game

Earlier in the day, 2 p.m. to be exact, Ballistic United under-12 will face Southern California at P.A.k. Stadium in San Jose.

The winner of each contest will be declared Western Regional Champion in thge Jr. National Challenge Cup. One other team, the Livermore Neutrons, is in the running for the under-19 Western Regional prize. Livermore will play in Pico Rivera near Los Angeles Saturday . If the Neutrons capture that contest, they will go back to Milwaukee in mid-June for the National Cup finals.

But locally it winds up this weekend.

United is attempting to make up for its elimination from State Cup play in April, by thumping the Strikers.

The Dublin team is 19-4-1 on the season, its last defeat, a 3-2 decision against Ballistic United in the State Cup. "I was out-coached in that game by Ian Lang," Wagonhoffer says. "He was aware that our principal strike power comes from Scott Evaristo inside and the passing of Hans Schlicker, so he double teamed the combination. But there are no sour grapes. We've had a good season, and we're a good team."

Though United fail to reach the State Cup finals this past season, it does own victories against both teams who were in the championship contest. That should make Dublin a favorite Saturday in Spartan Stadium.

United has good scoring power with Schlicker, Evaristo, John Downing and Luke Bryant up front. Halfback Bob Klein is a scoring threat as he proved with two goals in a 5-1 rout of West Valley two weeks ago.

Ballistic United will be favored in the under-12 division Saturday afternoon as it tangles with Southern California. United snapped a 123 game win streak by D.J. Federal Way of Seattle two weeks ago to reach this contest. Ballistic's record is 58-15-6.

Southern Cal defeated a Las Vegas team, 2-0 to reach the Western Regionals finals. United defeated that same Las Vegas team last November, 8-1.

United will count on strong offense from forward David Croteau, who scored twice in the 3-2 win over Federal Way in Seattle. Darren Hicks should be another key performer.

Southern California will be a strong defensive team, with one outstanding fullback. It also has a strong left side on the attack wall, according to Ballistic coach Harry Miller.

U-14's protest denied

Ballistic United's protest of an under-14 soccer match played two weeks ago in Seattle was thrown out by the United States Youth Soccer Association Monday.

The decision means that coach Bob Stewart's Pleasanton team will not be reinstated as a finalist in the Western Regional championship of the National Jr. Challenge Cup.

Ballistic lost its chance to play for the crown when it dropped a decision to the CWA Oilers of Seattle Saturday before last in Washington state.

However, Ballistic protested the contest before it ever started, claiming the Oilers were an all-star team of top players from the Seattle vicinity.

According to Stewart, teams in the Western Regional playoffs may not be "select," or all-star units. They must be clubs with a fixed roster.

California Youth Soccer Association president Pete Jevens carried Ballistic's complaint to the USYSA last week, along with a $50 protest fee.

Monday the protest and appeals committee dispatched a memorandum to Jevens, saying simply that the majority of the committee had denied the protest. The $50 was forfeited.

As a result, the Oilers will play this weekend for the under-14 Western Regional crown.

Jevens said there is no further recourse for the Ballistic team or the CYSA. Though dissappointed with the verdict, Jevens nevertheless hailed the protest movement.

"The victory was definitely on our side," Jevens said. "The majority voted to let the team (the Oilers) go on, but I feel it will do something good for the program. Because we put this in protest status, perhaps next year everybody will conform to the rules.

"I will continue using this matter to clarify any competition of this sort next year."

Local State Golf hopefuls include ex-Stang Anderson

Eleven local golfers will tee off at San Francisco's Olympic Club Monday morning in Northern California qualifying for the California State Amateur Championship to be held in late June at Pebble Beach.

The list includes the EBAL's golf champion, Jack Stevenson of Amador Valley High School. A number of former top EBAL golfers are also in the running.

Nearly 300 golfers will attempt to qualify at Olympic Club Monday. They will play 18 holes, and only 89 will advance to the State Amateur Championship beginning June 23.

Among the entrants are former Livermore High School golfers Vic Wolfe and Bob Fulton. John Peck, a graduate of Monte Vista High, will be in the field, along with another former Mustang golfer, Scott Anderson.

Vic led Chabot to the team title by tying for first place. He wound up second following a three-way sudden-death playoff.

Wolfe Chabot's leader

Vic Wolfe, former Livermore High golfer, averaged 72.9 strokes per round this past season in leading Chabot College to the state championship.

The season figure was nearly two full strokes better than his closest teammate, Jeff Dennis.

Wolfe helped the Gladiators to a whopping 15-stroke victory in the State Tourney at Ventura when he finished second

Wolfe tied former junior golf star Armando Claudio, and Mark Helsinger for first, but bowed to Helsinger in a sudden death playoff.

Chabot piled up a 14-2 mark in Golden Gate Conference dual meet golf, then won the GGC Conference Tournament, and the Northern California championship.

This was despite the fact the Gladiators lost their leading golfer of a year ago Mark Abfalter, through graduation. Livermore's Bob Fulton, another veteran player, failed to turn out this season.

"Other teams had good players, but our kids got the most out of themselves with their mental attitude," said Chabot coach Jay Yarbrough.

"I felt we faced an uphill battle, but still figured we had a good shot at the title," Yarbrough said.

Adopted grandmas

Junior Girl Scouts of Troop 755, Pleasanton, have "adopted" grandmothers from the Pleasanton Convalescent Hospital. As a troop, the girls visit their "grandmother" every two weeks and individually once a week. The Scouts help their grandmother in any way they can, ie, take her to the hospital library, write letters for her, play games or just sit and visit. Some of the grandmothers have no family living in the Valley and look forward to these visits.

Alameda planners deny zoning to develop Palomares acreage

Alameda County Bureau

HAYWARD - The Almeda County Planning Commission denied a precedent setting application Tuesday which would have allowed residential development on 164 acres of land in the Palomares Canyon area.

The application by Leona Phillips to rezone the acreage, located on Palomares Road, was denied by a 4-1 vote with one abstention.

The denial was in accord with the staff recommendation. The county planning staff had recommended denial because they believed granting the rezoning would allow the property owner a special privilege that was not warranted, would be in violation of the county's Rural Residential Policy and would create additional residential lots in an area that is already too extensively developed.

The land is currently zoned for agriculture and, if the application had been granted, would have been changed to single family residential with limited agriculture, 25-acre minimum building site area and 14-acre minimum building site area (for one 14-acre section of the property).

The commission also set a June 23 hearing date for a petition to reclassify three large parcels on Pleasanton Ridge from residential to open space.

The three parcels are 42 acres, 17 acres and 95 acres and two are located on Foothill Road west of Santos Rancho Road and the third is west of Castlewood Drive.

The reclassification would bring the properties in line with the county's General Plan in the area which calls for open space.

Third time charm

SR schools win finance vote

"I guess the third time's the charm" said a happy Alan Petersdorf Wednesday after the San Ramon Valley Unified School District finally earned approval for a badly-needed expansion.

The SRVUSD superintendent gave much c. the credit for the win to "a very fine committee of parents who worked so hard", even though two similar measures had gone down to defeat in the past 15 months.

The final tally was 4,004 yes, 3,513 no, a 53.2 per cent positive vote.

Oddly, both previous proposals — which were bond issues and required a two-thirds majority to pass — received higher percentages of yes votes but couldn't push past the 66.7 per cent mark.

This proposal avoided the necessity for two-thirds approval by using the new "lease-purchase" method of financing. Under this system, a non-profit corporation will be set up that will sell the bonds to raise the money for the new buildings. The district will eventually buy the buildings from the corporation with the money from the tax rate increase of 39 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Two of the three major projects will take place in San Ramon. The largest will be a brand new intermediate school on Pine Valley Road that should be ready for students in the fall of 1977. By then, California High will have a full senior class and will no longer have room for the seventh and eighth graders it presently houses.

Cal High will also benefit from the measure, as expansion of the home economics and shop buildings as well as planting of grass for athletic fields will now be able to proceed.

The final portion of the funds will go to renovating ramshackle San Ramon High School in Danville.

Petersdorf anticipates that it will take most of the rest of this year to set up the non-profit corporation and draw up the plans for the new school and other improvements. Actual contruction will most likely begin next year.

Youth service units back government site

Two valley youth counseling services are urging the Alameda County Board of Supervisors to reconsider its selection of the Mission Hill site in Pleasanton for the valley government center.

Valley Youth Services and Dublin Hotline, Inc., made that request in a letter to the supervisors. It is their hope that an alternative site, which would be less expensive and more accessible, would "free up General Fund monies to underwrite desperately needed human services."

The letter continues, "By reducing the amount capital projects may have to draw from the General Fund, the savings might then become available for the support of other services."

The two service agencies made their request "in view of the potential cuts in monies available to mental health, alcohol, and revenue sharing for 1975-76" that may have to be made because of reduced state funds.
